ONO CELL PENONS

As a manager the most important thing this exercise has done for me is to make me realize the diversity of the people, who are our greatest resource. In reading what my people had written, I concluded that, in striving for excellence, it may be the little things that matter and not the big. To achieve excellence in this Agency, we must make every human puzzle piece, no matter how tiny, feel equally important as every other puzzle piece in making the final picture become a masterpiece.

Purpose: To produce the most comprehensive, factual, and objective analysis of events and potential events affecting our national security, available anywhere, and, when specifically directed by the President to serve as an active agency of American foreign policy.

To achieve this:

Management must develop an organizational structure and mentality sufficiently flexible to harness, combine and, when necessary, rapidly redirect all human and equipment resources needed to accomplish any given task.

Management must recruit and select the best trained and most highly skilled employees needed for any task, bearing in mind that "availability" alone should not be the determining factor. Our benefit and salary structure and our training opportunities must be as much state of the art as our equipment and technology in attracting, developing and retaining the best employees from the entire country.

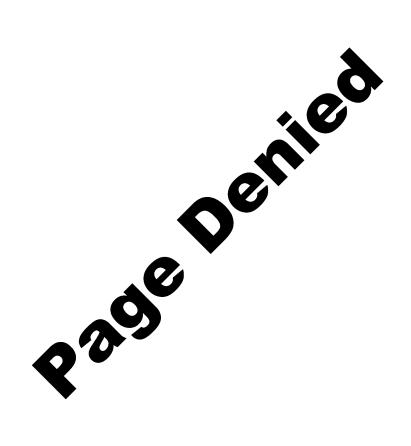

Management must communicate to employees a commoness of purpose by all actions taken, reinforcing the idea that all employees are equally important elements in achieving the Agency's goal.

All employees are responsible for creating an atmosphere of cooperation and open communication. Employees will participate in problem solving decisions of their work and be held responsible for the results of those decisions. Recognition for accomplishments is a right of employees and a responsibility of management.

All employees must recognize that achieving excellence may bring less compartmentation rather than more. This carries with it personal moral, ethical, and patriotic responsibilities that cannot be avoided. It also carries vast opportunities for creative contributions otherwise unachievable.

Purpose

To also provide a comprehensive and effective Service to all Caquerpersonnel that does not conflict with the main objective of providing intelligence support to the consumers.

Organization

To set up complete guide lines of what each department's functions and purposes are to enable everyone to interact more effectively and efficiently.

Ethics

To strengthen the integrity of each employee by enforcing the regulations set forth by Security and the Constitution by means of reprimanding the "wrongs" of anyone and rewarding the "rights". Example is if an employee consistently breaks the rules helshe should be reprimanded and if necessary - dismissed but if an employee shows an outstanding performance of consciousness with regard to security, etc. The she should be identified and praised for a job well done

Management To encourage uniform agreements on hours, leave, overtime, etc. for the entire agency, not individual offices. To remember employees are adults and shi recognize an employee who works on special project through his/her lunch hour, by giving an extra hour or excu a lateness at another time. To be flexible with "good" employees not baby sitters. Management personnel Should be required to attend more work shops within and out of the agency to improve their supercisory skills and "keep up with the times".

Measure of Results

To encourage the best possible quality of work that can be achieved and not necessarily the largest quantity.
